GRAB BURGLAR AT EAGLES' HOME

Officer Culp Arrests Mervin Rhodes After He Had Robbed Local Lodge.

Mervin Rhodes, 42, alias Mervin M. Hess, of Wilkes-Barre, was arrested at 3 o'clock this morning after police allege he broke into the Fraternal Order of Eagles' home, Chambersburg street, and stole two boxes of candy and a small sum of money from the cash register.

Rhodes was arrested by Officer Charles W. Culp, Jr., who was patrolling the alley in the rear of Chambersburg street, when he noticed the rear gate on the Eagles' lot ajar.

As soon as the officer began an investigation, he noticed a man attempting to climb over a fence separating the Eagles' lot from the lot at the Lackner home.

The officer ordered the man to halt. Rhodes obeyed and the officer placed him under arrest, and committed him to the borough lockup.

This morning Rhodes, who first gave the name of Hess, was taken before Justice of the Peace John C. Shearer who ordered him held for court on a charge of burglary. After the hearing the prisoner admitted his name was not Hess but Rhodes. The two boxes of candy which Rhodes is alleged to have taken from the Eagles' home were found at the fence the man was attempting to climb when he was arrested. Entrance to the Eagles' home was gained by jimmying a window, police said.

All children between the ages of two and six years are eligible to attend the school, provided they are vaccinated and free from communicable diseases.

Protest Condition Of Drinking Water

C. W. Epley, councilman from the second ward, today said that he has received numerous complaints about the unsanitary condition of the drinking water coming from residential spigots in Gettysburg. Mr. Epley said that he tasted drinking water from several spigots today and found that the complaints he had received were well founded and that the water was of an obnoxious taste.

Flushing the mains, the reason given by the water company some time ago, does not necessarily rectify the condition, Mr. Epley said.

The borough councilman said he was having special tests made of the water and that he would press his complaints before council.

BURNED MAN IS STILL CRITICAL

William Eckenrode Sets Fire To Clothes When He Pours Kerosene In Stove.

William Eckenrode, 60-year-old bachelor, who was severely burned when fire destroyed his home in Freedom township, near Fairplay, early Thursday morning, remained in a serious condition at the Warner hospital today.

From Eckenrode, hospital physicians learned that his clothing caught fire shortly after midnight, Thursday, when he attempted to kindle smoldering embers in the kitchen stove with the use of kerosene.

As Eckenrode poured the highly inflammable liquid on the fire, flames shot out of the stove, igniting the man's clothing.

Eckenrode, who lived alone, was severely burned from his waist to his feet. His hands also were burned when he attempted to beat out the flames.

Before leaving the house, Eckenrode's burning clothing set fire to the house. The two-story frame house, together with a corn crib, was totally destroyed, but the Eckenrode fire company, which was called at 12:40 o'clock, succeeded in saving the barn.

Eckenrode was found wading in water in a ditch outside his home by neighbors who were attracted to the place by the fire.

Mr. Levin, who has been in Gettysburg for several days selling encyclopedias, was not feeling well on Wednesday and retired shortly after 11 o'clock, Mrs. Bollinger reported.

Thursday morning Mrs. Bollinger heard Mr. Levin in the bath room. At noon the roomer had not left his room and he could not be heard moving about. At two o'clock in the afternoon Mrs. Bollinger became alarmed and decided to investigate. She went to a second floor balcony and through a window saw Mr. Levin, apparently prostrate in bed.

Dr. E. A. Miller, Adams county coroner, was summoned and death was announced as due to heart failure.

FRANK WEAVER TELLS COURT HE CAN'T PAY

Continues Fight to Seek Release From Jail; Incarcerated October 15.

LAWYER CITES BANK STOCKS

From the witness stand in court today, Frank S. Weaver declared he was insolvent when he became executor of his father's estate on July 14, 1930, and is now destitute and unable to pay the distributive shares of his father's estate to his sister, Mrs. Anna W. Neely, of near Fairfield, and his brother, William B. Weaver, of Waynesboro.

Today's hearing was on a citation issued on Mrs. Neely and William B. Weaver to show cause why their brother should not be released from jail. After the taking of testimony was concluded, arguments began this afternoon before Judge Donald P. McPherson.

In the citation Weaver listed assets of $6,050 and debts and obligations of $7,819.09 at the time he became executor of his father's estate.

Bank Stocks

Although Weaver testified in direct testimony this morning that he was insolvent, J. Donald Swope, Esq., counsel for Mrs. Neely and her brother, showed that whereas Weaver, in his citation, listed 56 shares of First National bank stock as having no value on July 14, 1930, when he became executor of his father's estate, the shares had a value in excess of $3,000 at that time.

Edgar L. Deardorff, cashier at the First National bank, the only witness called by Mr. Swope, testified that the sale of his bank's stock nearest July 14, 1930, showed it was worth $62.50 a share.

Offered Settlement

Much of the testimony offered by Weaver at today's hearing was a repetition of previous testimony, and at the outset Mr. Swope objected, but the court permitted Sidney E. Friedman, Esq., of Harrisburg, Weaver's counsel, to continue with his examination.

Weaver testified, among other things, that he and Mr. Friedman went to Mr. Swope's office several months ago and offered the bank stock and an automobile toward the payment of the distributive shares, but that Mr. Swope refused the offer, saying he wanted cash.

Weaver, who has been in jail since October 15, testified that although he received $5,000 from a mortgage and the sale of his home, he is now insolvent. He said he lost a federal position because he was arrested in the present action and that his wife and daughter are both working to support and maintain themselves.

Charles W. Ogden, assistant cashier at the Gettysburg National bank, also was called to the stand by Mr. Friedman to testify to certain dealings Weaver had at that bank.

Mr. Friedman also called Mrs. Weaver to the stand to testify what disposition she made of $500 given her by her husband after their home in Hunterstown was sold, but Mr. Swope objected and was sustained.

ARREST EIGHT FOR BOMBINGS

State Police Climax Year's Investigation Into Series Of Dynamitings.

Wilkes-Barre, Dec. 21 (AP).—State police today climaxed a year's investigation into a long series of dynamitings in the hard coal regions with the arrest of eight men.

The bombings began with strikes and controversies over wage and working agreements. Front porches were blown to bits and dwellings damaged.

Identities of five men who, troopers said, admitted a half dozen outbursts and three others named by the prisoners as instigators of the attack, were announced by Captain William A. Clark.

The five principals, taken into custody Tuesday and Wednesday, are: Edward Libudzewski, 23; John Stepinski, 23; William Wanus, 26; Joseph Zozlowski, 22, and Michael Yuhas, 39, all of Dickson City.

The five bombers, state police said, either are members or supporters of the United Anthracite Miners of Pennsylvania, which has been battling for supremacy in the anthracite fields with the United Mine Workers of America.

These also are in custody: Peter Salawada, of Dickson City, president of a United Anthracite Miners local union; Walter Churka, of Dickson City, local union committeeman, and John Gallick, of Oliphant, also a new union local official.

Edwards Appeals To Supreme Court

Argument will be heard before the court in Philadelphia that week. The appeal was made through the regulation form and no brief was filed.

Thinks Noakes Did Not Kill Children

Harrisburg, Dec. 21 (AP).—Chief of Police E. E. York, of Roseville, California, home of the "babes in the wood" tragedy victims, says he believes the three little girls died of suffocation in an automobile.

Replying by letter to a Pennsylvania state police query asking information concerning Elmo J. Noakes and his family, York expresses the belief that Noakes did not slay the children.

The girls were found near Pine Grove Furnace last November, the same day on which Noakes and his niece, Winifred Peirce, were found shot to death in a railroad shack near Altoona.

York explains that Noakes' deep affection for his two little girls and stepdaughter was known throughout Roseville. He suggests Noakes and Miss Peirce found the children killed by carbon monoxide poisoning and the fear they would be suspected of having done away with the children, they entered into a suicide pact at Duncanville.

Pittsburgh was the only team to score against Minnesota in 1934 while the Gophers had their first string lineup in the game.

Roosevelt Assigned Fullback Post on All-United States Team

Washington, Dec. 21 (AP).—Franklin D. Roosevelt, former tackle and fullback at Groton, might call signals for a mythical "all-United States" eleven that could be assembled from officials "now playing for Uncle Sam."

One genuine all-American would be among its members. He is Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York. Harvard tackle, who was named on Walter Camp's all-American teams in 1908 and 1909.

The president was a regular at Groton Prep and played on scrub teams at Harvard.

An all-government team might shape up something like this:

End—Walter, Georgetown. Tackle—Fish, Harvard. Center—Rogers, Dartmouth. Guard—Reed, Cornell. Tackle—Dern, Nebraska. End—Robert, Georgia Tech. Quarter—Lambertson, Ottawa. Halfback—Bankhead, Alabama. Halfback—Randolph, Salem. Fullback—Roosevelt, Groton school.

The quarterback is Representative W. P. Lambertson, of Kansas, who did his playing at the University of Ottawa, but the fullback would be expected to call the signals. It's been a long time since the president played, but he knows each man's duties well and often re-

Liquor Control Agent in This Area Dismissed

Paul L. Stone, state liquor control board agent, who was stationed in York for the last six weeks in connection with law enforcement in York, Adams and Lancaster counties, has been dismissed, according to a news dispatch from Harrisburg. Clyde E. Smith, director of licensing and enforcement for the board, made the announcement, and gave for the reason of dismissal "unsatisfactory service." He declined to be more specific.

Agent Stone stated that he couldn't understand why his work was unsatisfactory, as he had made 11 raids in York since December 1.

Stone stated that he was in session with the liquor board Wednesday afternoon and that he understood them to say that he was to be re-instated and would be transferred to Pittsburgh. York peace officers and sheriff's deputies speak well of Agent Stone. They claim he was a conscientious and hard worker.

MOTHER OF 4 DIES OF BURNS

Clothing Catches Fire as Woman Is Burning Rubbish in Harrisburg.

Harrisburg, Dec. 21.—Burned about the face and body when her dress caught fire while she was working in the cellar at her home Thursday morning, Mrs. Beulah Davis, 38, died Thursday night in the Harrisburg hospital shortly before 10 o'clock.

Mrs. Davis' dress apparently caught fire while she was burning some rubbish in the cellar. She ran to the back yard where her screams attracted a neighbor who called Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gladfelter.

Gladfelter ran to the aid of Mrs. Davis and attempted to extinguish the flames by wrapping her in a rug. He suffered minor burns about the hands and face.

Mrs. Davis was taken to the hospital in the ambulance.

Wade M. Davis, husband of the victim, had accompanied a load of furniture to 1138 Bailey street, where the family had made arrangements to move, when the tragedy occurred.

The four Davis children were in school at the time of the accident. They are: Jean, 14; Melvin, 9; Edress, 7, and Evelyn, 11.

Coroner Howard E. Milliken said Mrs. Davis died of second degree burns of almost the entire body.

Daughter Finds Her Father With His Throat Cut

Harrisburg, Dec. 21.—Found lying on the basement floor of his home with a deep gash in his throat and a razor lying beside him, Emanuel Flory, 71, Penbrook, was admitted to the Harrisburg hospital Thursday afternoon in a serious condition.

His daughter, Mrs. John Longenecker, submitted to a blood transfusion in hopes of saving his life. Physicians said Flory's condition was grave as his windpipe is partly severed and he had lost quite a bit of blood.

The daughter said she arrived home about 5:30 p. m. Thursday and found the back door locked. She went to the front door and on entering the house, she missed her father. Seeing a light in the basement she investigated and found him lying on the floor.

Asked why he cut his throat Flory replied that he was worried about things and "wanted to be with mother," the daughter said. Flory's wife died three years ago.

Affirm Conviction Of Dr. A. Wynekoop

Chicago, Dec. 21.—Central figure in a spectacular criminal trial a year ago, Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop sat placidly in a prison cell at Dwight, Illinois, Thursday at the time a decision of the Illinois supreme court, confirming her conviction, was announced.

Doctor Wynekoop was not told of the decision which upheld also her twenty-five year prison sentence. She was convicted of murdering her 23-year-old daughter-in-law, Rheta Wynekoop.

Miss Helen Hazard, superintendent of the prison, said that Doctor Wynekoop's health had not been so good and that she probably would not be told of the decision until the mandate of the supreme court arrived.

Prison officials said that she had been an inmate of the prison hospital since the day she was committed last March.

Surprise Party At Cool Residence

STOCK REPORT

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—The stock market showed some signs of improvement today although moderate irregularity persisted in scattered share groups that have recently been under pressure.

Shares of Consolidated gas and North American managed to recover small fractions but Public Service of New Jersey dipped a point or so before meeting support and American Telephone lost as much. Standard Oil of New Jersey came to life with an advance of a point and a firm tone was displayed by Eastman Kodak, Standard Oil of California, American Can, National distillers and a number of others.

Idid not kill Osborne

By VICTOR BRIDGES

SYNOPSIS: Jerry Mordaunt just has returned to his flat from getting ready for a sail, to find the apartment full of friends. Molly O'Brien is there, just rescued from possible torture by a group of men determined to have a formula they think she has; Nicholas Trench, her rescuer, is there, and so is Jimmy Fox, erstwhile page-boy at Molly's hotel, who has helped in the rescue as well. Nick and Jerry are, trying to help Molly find the formula, worth millions. It has been stolen from her.

Chapter 32

MOLLY'S STORY

"By the way," said Jerry as he started out of the room, "what shall we do with Jimmy Fox?"

"If you have no objection," I said, "I vote that we take him into the syndicate. He'll certainly get the sack from the hotel and we can't let him down after the way he behaved last night."

"I should think not," was the answer. "Besides, he'll be useful on the Seagull. He can wash up and look after George."

Leaving me to my ablutions, Jerry took himself off, and somewhat hampered by my damaged knuckles, I proceeded to make a hasty toilet. I was in the act of brushing my hair when the gong sounded, and as I came out into the hall, Molly emerged from the opposite bedroom. Swathed in a dressing-gown at least three sizes too large for her, she looked comically pretty.

"Good morning Nick," she said cheerfully. "I hope you had a good night?"

"Slept like a top," I replied. "And you?"

"She made a little grimace. "The headache's gone, but I've still got a funny taste in my mouth."

"Breakfast will cure that," I assured her. "How's the cheek?"

"It feels rather stiff and sore." She tilted up her face. "Am I a dreadful sight?"

I inspected her carefully. "You look lovely," I said. "Like an angel on her way to the bathroom."

"Angels don't have baths," she objected. "They—oh, here's Jerry!"

"Hello, Molly!" He had come out of the study, followed by Jimmy, who in his crumpled livery, and with his tousled hair, still seemed to be only half awake.

"This is a nice sort of trick to play on a chap!" he continued. "Getting yourself drugged and kidnapped when I wasn't there to rescue you."

"Sorry, Jerry." She dropped him a penitent curtsy. "It was horribly careless of me, wasn't it? If it hadn't been for Nick and Jimmy . . ."

"Oh, that reminds me—I haven't thanked you yet, Jimmy."

She crossed over to where he was standing and bending down, kissed him on the cheek. "I think you're the bravest boy I ever met, and I really am most frightfully grateful."

"Th—that's all right, Miss," Jimmy, who had turned a rich crimson, shifted awkwardly from one foot to the other. "I—didn't do nothing. It was Mr. Trench who sloshed 'im—not me, miss."

We all laughed.

"Never mind," said Jerry consolingly. "You got the prize anyhow. Now cut along to the kitchen and Dawson will give you some breakfast."

He slipped his arm through Molly's. "For pity's sake let's go in and make a start. I was up at six o'clock this morning and I'm simply famished."

Faced with a steaming dish of eggs, bacon and sausages I found that my own appetite was by no means to be despised. I ladled out three generous helpings, while Jerry attended to the coffee, and dumped one of them down in front of Molly.

"Get your teeth into that, partner," I said, "and when you feel a bit stronger you can tell us how it all happened."

"I am ready to start now," she replied. "I can talk and eat at the same time."

With a familiar gesture she brushed back the lock of copper-colored hair which had fallen forward across her forehead.

"You mustn't mind my being a bit vague about things. I suppose it was the stuff they gave me, but somehow or other it all seems like a bad dream."

She took a slip from the cup which Jerry handed her. "I had been up in my room the whole evening reading a book, and about half-past nine I thought I would like a glass of milk before going to bed. I rang the bell and told the maid to bring it up. It tasted all right, and I was just beginning to undress, when I suddenly came over all queer and giddy."

"I tried to get to the door but I suppose I must have tumbled down. Anyhow, I don't remember anything more until I woke up feeling terribly sick and found myself on the bed in that horrible little room with Orloff and Dimitri bending over me."

"I didn't know where I was or how I'd got there, and I'd no time to think. They started on me right away. It was Orloff who did the talking, while Dimitri just stood by looking at me. I shall never forget the expression in his eyes—" she shivered—"it was loathsome."

Jerry muttered something under his breath.

"What did Orloff say to you?" I demanded.

She knitted her forehead. "I've been trying so hard to remember. I was half stupid, you see, and it's all jumbled up and confused. I know he asked me any amount of questions about the formula."

"He wanted to know where Nick had hidden it, and what the paper is like it's written on, and whether we were trying to sell it to Sir William Avan. All the time he was questioning me he kept on squeezing and pinching my arm. It hurt so I could hardly help screaming."

She pulled up the sleeve of her dressing-gown and a muffled oath escaped from Jerry's lips. Just above the elbow two or three livid bruises stood out against the white skin.

"I wish I'd seen those last night," I said savagely. "I'd have smashed the swine's face in."

"Go on," said Jerry gruffly. "What else had the hound to say?"

"He told me that I was to write a note asking Nick to give him the formula. He said that otherwise I should be put on a barge, and taken down to a Russian ship that's lying in the river, and that once I was there they'd soon make me do whatever I was ordered."

"Well, as I knew you hadn't got the formula, and it couldn't possibly make any difference, I agreed to write it. As soon as I'd finished it, he started questioning me again."

"He wanted to find out about this place Hambridge and why we were going there. When I said I didn't know, they tied me down to the bed, and it was then that I got this cut on the cheek."

"After that I think I must have fainted, because the next thing I remember is hearing a noise in the hall and seeing Nick's torch as he came in at the door."

Jerry scooped out some marmalade and dug back the spoon viciously into the pot. "We ought both to be kicked. We should never have left her there after that business with the waiter. It's plain enough the blighter heard what we said. He must have given them the tip that we were thinking of clearing out, and I suppose they made up their minds to grab hold of her while they had the chance."

"Well, don't worry about it," said Molly soothingly. "The important thing is what are we going to do now?"

"Carry on, of course. We must see this farmer and his wife; though I don't suppose we shall get much out of them. Anyhow, you'll be safer on the Seagull than anywhere else."

"How about her things?" I struck in. "We can't leave them at the Milan. If they don't get any message from her they'll probably think she's dead and hand them over to the police."

Jerry reflected for a moment. "You must scribble them a line," he said, turning to Molly, "and I'll send Dawson round with it now. Ask them to give him your account and to him hand over your luggage. You can explain that I'm taking care of your things until you're out of hospital."

I presented George, who was sitting beside me, with my last piece of bacon. "Do you mean to start for Leigh at once, then?"

He nodded. "Sooner we get a move on the better. The boat's quite ready. I've stocked her up with enough food for three or four days, and if the wind's right we can slip round on the evening tide. By the way, I suppose you've got those keys?"

"Yes," I said. "They're in my bedroom. Avon sent them round yesterday."

"Good!" He sat for a moment staring thoughtfully in front of him; then his features relaxed in a sudden characteristic grin. "Funny how keen one gets about a thing! I shall never be really happy until we dig out this blessed formula."

HUGE FLYING BOAT IN SUCCESSFUL TEST

Baltimore, Dec. 21.—The largest flying boat ever built in this country—a craft that may blaze an air passenger trail to the Orient—was lifted off choppy water Thursday for a successful test flight.

She is Pan-American Airways' forty-eight passenger craft, now known only as Flying Clipper No. 7.

Pan-American officials already have plans to send the clipper on a mail flight from California to China by way of the Midway islands, Honolulu and Guam. It will not be an official mail route, but will be used to test the assertion of Assistant Postmaster General Harlee Branch that regular Pacific transport service is only a question of time. Preliminary studies have been made of west coast bases.

MAROONS LOSE BY ONE POINT

High Quintet Defeated by York Cagers 22-21, in York, Thursday.

Seemingly the victims of nervousness during the first half in which they scored but two points, the Gettysburg high school basketball team dropped a one-point decision to York high on the York court, Thursday evening, in the opening game of the season, 22-21.

Coach George Forney's team was completely outplayed in the first half which ended with the York team leading, 16-2.

A determined Maroon quintet took the floor in the second half and reversed the tables on York but found the big lead too much to over-come.

Merle Guise was the spear-head of the locals attack in the second half and looped three field goals. A pair of fouls by Bushman during the second period were the Maroons' only tallies in the first half.

Shultz and Gilbert featured for York.

The Maroon and White scrubs crashed through to an easy victory by drowning the York scrubs in the preliminary game, 23-12, leading 14-5 at half time.

fifth Adams county institute was called to order Monday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock in Xavier Hall. Rev.
J. B. Baker conducted the opening devotional exercises, with the music in charge of Professor Harry J. Taylor, of Lancaster.

Read the Bible With Us Daily

And there came thither certain Jews from Antioch and Iconium, who persuaded the people, and, having stoned Paul, drew him out of the city, supposing he had been dead.

Howbeit, as the disciples stood around about him, he rose up, and came into the city; and the next day he departed with Barnabas to Derbe.

And when they had preached the gospel to that city, and had taught man, they returned again to Lystra, and to Iconium, and Antioch.

Confirming the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God.

And when they had ordained them elders in every church, and had prayed with fasting, they commended them to the Lord, on whom they believed.

And after they had passed throughout Pisidia, they came to Pamphylia.

And when they had preached the word in Perga, they went down into Attalia:

And thence sailed to Antioch, from whence they had been recommended to the grace of God for the work which they fulfilled.

And when they were come, and had gathered the church together, they rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how he had opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles.

And there they abode long time with the disciples.

Today's Talk

By George Matthew Adams

EXPLANATIONS

EXPLANATIONS are fine, but there is one thing that cannot be explained—and that is life. No one ever has been able to explain it—and no one ever will be able to do so.

Life was given to us to accept, not to explain. We have a job big enough, merely in handling it aright, and in properly equipping ourselves for a good showing in its arena, or upon its stage.

There are interests enough in life to satisfy the most avid imagination, or the most restless personality.

We are fortunate to be able to explain many of the mysteries of life, and the longer we live the more remarkable life seems, but if we understood all about it in the beginning, there would be no incentive to go on, to rise higher, or to develop the natural gifts bequeathed to us at birth.

Many of us are continually making mistakes—and for some reason or other, we try to explain them away—but we always get into some new trouble in trying to do so. A mistake is a mistake. The only sensible thing to do in such a dilemma is to acknowledge it and, in the words of Josh Billings, not to make the same one "twice."

So much time is lost in making explanations, too—and they are never accepted happily. There is always disappointment lodged in the mind of the one to whom one explains.

The only explanations of value are those that clear up our minds, and add knowledge to our fund of information.

I read a very interesting comment upon W. H. Hudson, the naturalist, recently in a new book by Frank Swinnerton. He said that Hudson was cold and that his emotions were buried under pride. Death to him was the great mystery and he thought continuously about it from his sixteenth year, and yet he wrote little of his own poverty and disappointments.
Rather did he give his life to the watching of wild birds, "noting what they did in happiness and peril, and in love or war." Says this commentator, further, toward the great world of the animal kingdom, "he felt unique power of understanding, based upon the vicissitudes of all sufferers from the inhumanity of man." And so his work gained great distinction.

We will be so much happier each day if we try to understand more and not attempt to explain so much.

CHRISTMAS AT HOME

What for Christmas shall we do?
Shall we search for pleasures new Shall we try the day to fill
With some strange, exquisite thrill?
No, I answer, rather stay
Round the hearth this Christmas Day.

Let us stretch the table out;
Seat the family round about,
Young and old and with a din
Bring the Christmas pudding in.
Let us try once more to know
All the joys of long ago.

Let us set the day apart
To be gay and blithe of heart.
Let the home with laughter shake
Once again for old times' sake.
Let's set every eye aglow
With a bough of mistletoe.

Of at Christmas you recall
We were happiest of all.
All together then were we,
One united family.
And what merriment we had Back with mother and with dad!

Let us have a Christmas tree
Like the one that used to be
And a Santa Claus to call Gifts for loved ones, one and all.
In the old-time tender way
Let us keep next Christmas Day.

Woman Asks Earle To Find a Husband

Philadelphia, Dec. 21 (AP).—Just when Governor-elect George H.
Earle had almost finished picking his cabinet, along comes a brown-eyed miss with another problem, for her from among his bachelor friends.

Her letter, received at Earle's office Thursday, follows:
"I want a darling husband for Christmas, tall, with blue eyes, 65 years old, worth a million, same as I am. Small brown eyes, called pretty, respectable and very much in earnest.

"Please give this to your best looking bachelor friend. He must love God and we must love each other better than life before we marry."

"Hoping you receive the greatest desire of your heart this Xmas Day,
I am."

The letter was signed "Annie Dale" and gave an address in Kansas City, Missouri.

Huey Long Rides Rough-Shod As He Gets "Supreme" Power

Baton Rouge, La., Dec. 21.— Striking with haste and abandon, the lawmakers of Louisiana Thursday vested Senator Huey Long, their political master, with despotic powers over the entire state.

Local self-government was swept away by legislative ukase, without debate.

Industries and politicians who have opposed the kingfish were smitten with spite laws.

The city administration of Alexandria was ousted because local sentiment there once arose to such a pitch that stink bombs and rotten eggs were showered on Long when he tried to make a political speech.
New officials will be sent in (appointed by Governor O. K. Allen, a cog in Long's state political machine.

Teachers' Jobs Seized
East Baton Rouge parish, home of the capital city, was reduced to the status of a province, to be ruled by the state machine.

The jobs of 12,000 school teachers, thousands of policemen and firemen, tax assessors and deputy sheriffs, were seized as political patronage for Long.

New occupational license taxes were placed on every manufacturer, except those producing ice, bread and milk. Makers of tin cans, clothing, wall board, glass and pine products, kitchenware, pulp paper and dozens of other products are affected.

A five-cent-a-barrel tax was placed on all crude oil refined in the state. This was the same bill which precipitated the impeachment of Huey Long as governor in 1929, and he guffawed loudly as he took "revenge on the Standard Oil company." The bill was not even debated.

These two taxes alone are expected to produce nearly $4,000,000 a year. At the same time the supervisor of public accounts is authorized to spend an additional $200,000 a year collecting taxes.

There are 31 bills in the full program. Amendments were dumped at the last minute and many were not read aloud. The full import of the new laws may not be learned for several days. The legislature adjourned sine die at noon, after a session beginning Monday night.

Laws Soon Effective
The new laws will go into effect in 20 days.
New Orleans' administration, which has fought Long bitterly, is ham-strung by new laws. The city has virtually no control over its finances. Liquor and paving taxes are either denied or curtailed. State financial aid is withdrawn. Tax assessors, deputy sheriffs and even assistant district attorneys will henceforth be named by Long. The city is forbidden to reduce police and fire department appropriations, and must take the inevitable retrenchment elsewhere.

Every policeman and fireman in Louisiana who does not get a warrant from Long's controlled state police board before the new laws go into effect will be ousted automatically. If he refuses to surrender gun and badge, he will be guilty of impersonating an officer.

Few Legislators Protest
The commissioner of streets in Baton Rouge was ousted without explanation because he opposed Long.

Long prowled the floors, cajoling members, as the legislature wound up its work. There were only a few feeble protests. Representative Norman Bauer asked, "What excuse is there for seizing Alexandria?"

"The city is misgoverned," he was told. "Every convict that escapes from prison heads for that city.
They overrun the streets and ter-rorize the people."

Minnesota, St. Louis Cards Dominate Colorful Sports Year

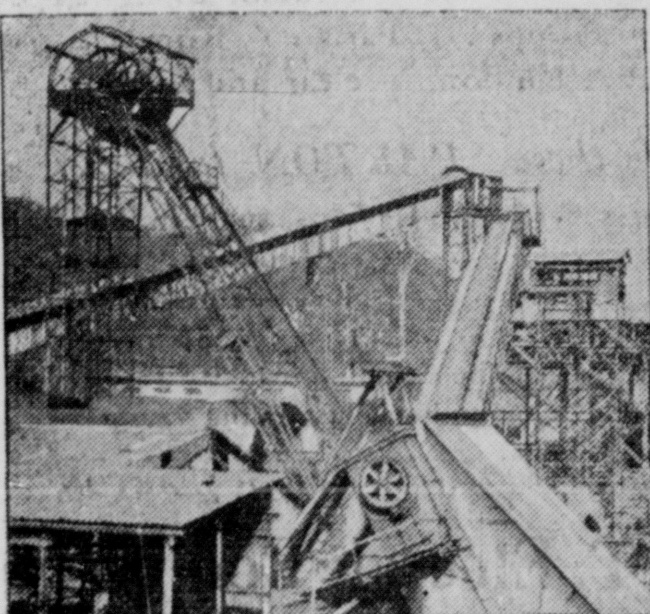

Christmas holiday plans at the White House included a dinner dance at which friends of Franklin, Jr., and John Roosevelt, including Miss Jean Martineau (above) of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., and Miss Barbara Cushing of New Haven, Conn., were invited. (Associated Press Photo)

Betty Gow, former Lindbergh nurse and last person to see the Lindbergh baby alive, planned to sail to America, according to reliable reports from Glasgow, to be a witness in the kidnap-murder case. (Associated Press Photo)

Two teams, the St. Louis Cardinals in baseball, winners of the most hectic World Series in many a moon, and the University of Minnesota football aggregation, generally acclaimed as the nation's first eleven, dominated a colorful sports year in 1934. Other highlights included the ascension of Dizzy Dean to baseball's No. 1 spot; the crowning of Maxie Baer as heavyweight boxing king; the golf triumphs of Lawson Little; Fred Perry's complete claim to the tennis spotlight; and the performances of Bill Bonthron, Princeton, and Jack Torrance, Louisiana, in track; Lenore Kight in swimming; and Bobby Grayson, Stanford All-America back, on the gridiron. Altogether, it was a great year for sports lovers, with new heroes, and new feats. (Associated Press Photos)

Dagmar's Adventures In Santa Claus Land

By SIGRID ARNE

SYNOPSIS: Santa has been promised by the mole king that his subjects will leave the Toyland holly trees alone, and in return Santa has promised the mole king a batch of cookies every Christmas Eve. The mole king has remained for Christmas Eve just to see the toyshop.

Chapter XIII

DAGMAR IS SURPRISED

So the mole king stayed overnight at the toyshop, and slept in a doll bed.

Santa had a good night's rest because all his worries were over, and all the toys were finished. There was nothing to do but bake the last batch of cookies, and mix up the last batch of Christmas candy. And Mrs. Santa always does that while Santa is packing his sleigh to come down to the world.

The mole king was just as excited as the rest of the toyshop. He "Oh'd" and he "Ah'd" when he saw the rows of toy autos. He even rode in one. He laughed at the toy monkeys that slide up and down sticks, and he wanted to see how paper dolls are dressed.

Mrs. Santa let him lick a spoon she was using to stir the peppermint candy and he begged a fresh cookie from her as she pulled a pan from the oven. The sun was sinking when all the jobs were done. Santa even painted a new suit on the tin soldier, because he looked worn after all his adventures.

But when Santa and the fairies came to Dagmar to fix her dress she was crying. "Why, what's this?" said Santa.

"I love only you, as the wise fairy told me," wept Dagmar, "and I don't want to be a Christmas gift."

"But only fairies and elves and gnomes and Mrs. Santa and I stay in the toyshop all the time," said Santa. "Toys must go down to the world."

"Then I don't want to be a toy," said Dagmar.

"You don't?" said the pretty fairy who had sewn her dress. "Why don't you join us, and work here always?"

"I'd love to," said Dagmar.

"Fine," said Santa.

"Fine," cried the fairies, and they all waved their little wands over her and wished. Suddenly the little doll felt pretty fairy wings sprouting right out of her shoulders. She felt her curls, and there was a fairy star, and in her hand appeared a tiny fairy wand. She was a doll no longer, but a fairy. And she is in Toyland to this day, working there and very happy.

That year Santa took no holly wreaths to our homes. But the next year there was a fine crop because the mole king had moved his home to another field.

And every Christmas Mrs. Santa bustles out to his tunnel door and leaves a big batch of cookies for him.

The moles have a grand time eating them—just as you will tomorrow on Christmas morning.

MERRY CHRISTMAS TO YOU ALL!

WHEN IS A TURKEY?

Pittsburgh (AP).—Butchers and poultrymen were arguing before the city council on a market house controversy. Carroll Collins, city property superintendent, told the council butchers shouldn't be permitted to sell poultry. "Meat is turkey," interjected Councilman Robert Garland. "But," he added, "you couldn't say that beef was poultry."

That was somewhat complicated, so the solons passed on to other matters.

Elephant Boris Tried to Sell U. S. Circus Dies of Old Age

Sofia, Bulgaria, Dec. 21 (AP).—One of two elephants which King Boris was offering for sale to an American circus died Thursday of rheumatism and old age.

The Bulgarian monarch, who is a great lover of animals, seemed as grief-stricken over the loss of his gigantic pet as he would have been over the death of one of his own children.

He gave orders that the beast, a rare specimen from the Indian jungle, should be stuffed and mounted in the national museum.

In view of the death of the elephant, one of the main attractions of the King's private menagerie here, the King changed his mind about selling the other. His secretary so informed an American circus which had made an offer to purchase it.

Meanwhile the government agreed to increase the King's budget to allow for maintenance of the royal zoo, which includes, besides the elephant, a number of fine specimens of tiger, zebra, giraffe and American buffalo, as well as snakes and small animals.

King Boris announced last Sunday he was looking for a customer for his elephants because he could not afford to keep them in fodder. He inherited the beasts from his father, whose hobby was zoology.

the troops remained would be in providing housing facilities, Smith said. Plans of how the organization would be formed were not disclosed, but Smith said "it was requested that those who would do so volunteer to serve."

The frenzy of the mob apparently had abated Thursday night and the peaceful citizens looked at the black hulk of the court house in silence, which contrasted strangely with the disorder in the public square Wednesday night.

Probe Awaits Conference
Meanwhile, investigation by authorities was delayed pending a conference between Judge T. L. Coleman and Prosecutor W. B. Knott. Judge Coleman said he was putting off the conference until certain that "things had quieted down."

The grand jury is in recess until January 21 but the court can call it posals for the formation of a vigilante committee.

Gilford Freeman, 45, died of an abdominal wound. A house painter and an unidentified man were the other victims.

The plan for the forming of the vigilante committee is designed to prevent any further outburst of racial feelings. A small army of National Guardsmen—600 in number—is on duty and the town was peaceful Thursday.

Tried To Get Negro
Wednesday's mob action was due to efforts of infuriated persons making three attempts—all unsuccessful—to get E. K. Harris, young Negro, on trial for attacking a 14-year-old white girl. A number of persons suffered from tear gas and the bayonets and gunfire of National Guardsmen stationed at the court house to protect Harris.

Later, learning the Negro had been speeded out of the town disguised as a soldier with a gas mask hiding his face, the mob burned the court house.

C. C. Smith, city recorder, said of the vigilante proposal that such an organization "would be to assist the city and county authorities in maintaining peace and order."

"They would serve as an armed body if it should be found necessary after the guardsmen leave," he added, "and would also assist in any other way possible while troops are here."

Lieut.-Col. John R. Stark, in command of the guardsmen on duty here Wednesday, said that "every shot that was fired by the guardsmen was fired in self-defense."

"The discipline of the men was absolutely perfect," he said, "and nobody who has not been through such an experience will never know the stinging epithets and the abuse which was heaped upon the boys from the time the mob began to form until they broke into the court house and the men were ordered to return the fire at the mob."

Justice Peyton Gordon Thursday agreed with the contentions of Ansell that the Louisiana senator's latest motion was "frivolous" and "groundless."

Ansell brought suit in March, 1933, charging that Long had libeled him in a speech the Louisiana senator made on the senate floor and later circulated through the mails.

libeling Samuel T. Ansell, former judge advocate general of the army, failed Thursday.

The district of Columbia supreme court threw out his motion that he was immune from service of summons in the $500,000 suit by Ansell.

Previously Long had filed a motion to quash the suit on the grounds of constitutional immunity because he is a senator. The United States supreme court upheld the lower court's action.

3 KILLED IN PLANT BLAST

Two Bodies Hurl'd 200 Feet And Third Is Found in Factory Wreckage.

Scranton, Dec. 21 (AP).—Three men were killed Thursday night when a press room at the powder plant of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours and company at Jessup was wrecked by an explosion.

The victims are William Martin, 53, of Jermyn; Geoffrey Taylor, 32, and Lloyd Myers, 33, both of whom resided near the powder mills.

One small building, housing the press room where powder goes through a preliminary process to prepare it for use in the anthracite fields, was blown to bits. Loss was estimated at less than $10,000.

The bodies of the three men, all of which were recovered in about an hour, were badly burned, as the explosion was accompanied by great sheets of flame.

The victims comprised the entire night shift at the powder plant and had been at work since Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Cause Undetermined

The force of the blast hurled the bodies of Myers and Taylor about 200 feet from the building. Martin's body was discovered in the wreckage.

Walter Gebhardt, superintendent, and M. C. Cook, general manager, were among the first officials on the scene. They said that they could assign no reason for the blast at this time.

Ambulances and police, as well as physicians from nearby boroughs were rushed to the mountainside plant as word of the explosion spread rapidly. Hundreds of nearby residents, many of them having members of their families employed by the powder company, also rushed to the scene of the tragedy.

The detonation could be heard plainly in the nearby borough of Winton and in Olyphant, about three miles distant, the flash was seen by many.

Albert (Red) White, former star halfback at Colorado Agricultural college, is now assistant football coach at Colorado School of Mines.

BETTY'S WHEREABOUTS UNKNOWN EVEN TO KIN

Glasgow, Scotland, Dec. 21 (AP).—Whereabouts of Betty Gow, baby Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.'s nurse at the time he was kidnapped, were unknown Thursday even to her relatives. She was last seen Saturday at a piccadilly club.

While it was believed she was scheduled to sail for the United States from Glasgow next Saturday aboard the Duchess of York, some newspapers said she had gone undetected on the Aquitania although this was denied by the ship's authorities.

Forty-one of the 43 members of the present football squad at Colorado State College of Agriculture are natives of the state.
